Description

The management of natural resources is one of the main pillars – next to poverty eradication and sustainable consumption and production – which form the foundation of a global sustainable development. It is widely acknowledged that a decent life for all cannot be achieved without fundamental changes in the way the global society produces and consumes. Therefore this awareness raising and capacity building project will focus on the link between (over-) consumption and unsustainable production patterns of raw materials in Europe on the one hand, and poverty, conflict, and environmental destruction in resource rich countries on the other hand. It will turn this into an engine for sustainable development in the EU as well as developing countries. The project will aim to use a socially and ecologically responsible EU policy on raw materials in order to exert significant influence on sustainable development aims within the EU as well as globally. To reach this aim the action has a strong impact on citizens, journalists, multipliers, companies and politicians, who are all relevant stakeholders in shaping a more sustainable future in Europe. The action will be structured in such a way that it will lead to long-term improvements of the situation for target groups and final beneficiaries at the level of overall objectives. At the specific objectives level, the project will effect middle term improvements of the situation for the target groups. Overall goal of the project is contributing to European citizens' understanding of the interdependencies between consumption and production in North-South relations, promoting changed attitudes and consumption practices and active participation in pan-European debates on sustainable development. Specific project goals: 1. The EU introduces binding regulations regarding human rights and environmental standards for the extraction of raw materials for industry 2. The activities of EU companies fully consider human rights and environmental standards in the extraction and use of raw materials through the whole value chain 3. The EU reduces the use of raw materials through the reform of production and consumption patterns 4. Non-renewable energy use is phased out in the EU 5.
